Escape the Canadian winter this year by crossing the equator to a place enjoying the height of summer – New Zealand.

Summer in New Zealand means sizzling barbecues and swimming at the beach, salads, sauvignon blanc and lazy days at the bach (the Kiwi word for a holiday home). New Zealand celebrates at this time of year and there's a party to suit just about everyone, from delectable wine and food festivals to the relaxed sounds of home-grown New Zealand music.

With geography spanning beaches, mountains, forests, rivers and lakes, volcanic plateaus and glacial vistas, and bubbling thermal activity, New Zealand's scenery leaves nothing to the imagination. With one third of the country as national parks there is plenty of space to get active in the great outdoors.

New Zealand is renowned for its range of adventure pastimes and summer is the perfect time to try river surfing, gliding, bungy jumping and scuba diving. And at the end of the day rejuvenate in quality accommodation.

Fresh and vibrant, New Zealand's wine and food is amongst the best in the world. Taste is paramount. Talented and innovative chefs combine ingredients freshly harvested from garden, land and sea. Pacific influences, organic produce and indigenous foods make it unique. But its distinctiveness is in the way New Zealanders eat – in an environment that is relaxed and unaffected, in keeping with the laidback Kiwi psyche.

Unique to New Zealand is the indigenous Maori culture, which forms the basis of New Zealand culture and is interwoven into everyday life. You'll find many opportunities to experience Maori culture first-hand, with the best known experiences found in the geo-thermal region of Rotorua. Try a traditional hangi with Maori kai (food) cooked on hot stones underground and take in a moving cultural performance.

No matter what you desire, you'll find it in New Zealand. Book your Anderson Vacations itinerary today and experience the youngest country on earth.
